Eviences of deliberate extortion and unwarranted increases in food prices, with the European war as an excuse, were detailed to the President and the Cabinet officers today by Attorney General McReynolds. The President was informed that the net was being drawn closer around those persons who are responsible for the inflated prices and prosecutions would result.

The probe in prices in the District. now in progress by the Federal grand jury under the direction of District Attorney Clarence R. Wilson, has been extended to include drug stores. On information furnished by the Department of Justice, the grand jury's attention has been cailed to a Washington druggist who has made a marked increase in the price of olive oil. With a liberal supply of oil on hand, the department has been advised, the retail price has been marked up from 50 cents a pint to 60 cents, although the product is imported from neutral territory.

The exportation of foodstuffs from the United States is prohibited by a bill introduced in the House by Congressman Vare of Pennsylvania, and a mendment to the Constitution call. Keating argues that great quantities of foodstuffs now being held up for export would quickly be thrown on the market and thus the price of food would be reduced materially. On the other side of the Capitol, Sena-or Culberson has suggested amending the Clayton anti-trust bill, making the measure respond to the present emergency in punishing conspirators and price fixers. "It looks like some of these dealers ought to go to jail," he mented in touching on the present

For Quick Prosecution.

The Department of Justice encouraged by the reports that continue to pour in, is now giving its attention to a plan for quick prosecution of all offenders. Inquiries by Federal grand juries, under direction of United States district attorneys, is believed to be the plan favored. In this way, de-partment officials pointed out today, delay would be obviated. Investigation of the cause of raising prices and indictment of persons found criminally table for conspiracy, thus would be "In a season when the production of wheat in the United States aggregates 900,000,000 bushels, 300,000,000 more than are needed for home consumption, there is no excuse at all for the increase in the price of flour in this country," he says. "Yet we find prices of foodstuffs going upward everywhere in the United States. With grocers demanding 7 cents a pound for sugar that could be bought for 4½ cents a week ago; with flour that was $5 a barrel now up to $6.50 and $7, and with the price of meat and other products steadily rising, the people of this country may well be concerned. "Every other nation on earth in this crisis is thinking of itself, thinking how it is going to live on its own resources, how much of other nations' resources it can get, and how it is going to keep it can get, and how it is going to keep its own people from want while Europe is deluged in blood. We are spending our time thinking of the world, rather than of our own people."

Blames Cost of Living On Abuse of Food Law

Attorney Matthew E. O'Brien made the claim before Justice Stafford in the District Supreme Court today that "the maladministration of the pure food law is largely responsible for the high cost of living."

The attorney was arguing for a further bill of particulars in the case of Ashby T. Tanner, who was indicted on a charge of violating the pure food law by selling milk containing bacteria. He urged that bacteria are not dangerous to the health, and declared that he would be able to prove by the Government's own expects that the that he would be able to prove by the Government's own experts that the cientific, world is divided on the sub-

From a German Point of View

The Times will print a resume daily of what the Staats Zeitung, of New York, and other leading German newspapers of the country, have to say each morning in regard to the situation on the war chess board in Belgium and in Alsace and on the Russian frontiers.

When cables from Brussels are allowed to pass the hands of the official censor, declaring that the Belgian government is taking its state papers and archives out of Brussels and that the staff and the King are abandoning the capital, there should be no doubt as to the truth of the statement. And when the Paris war ministry sends out the information that the French losses at Dinant were exceedingly heavy, it must be so, despite the fact that only yesterday Paris rang with the great victory achieved by the French in that battle.

The simple truth is that the Germans are pressing relentlessly forward. They are in Belgium, have, in fact, almost traversed the country and either have passed into France or are about to do so, between Lille and Maubeuge almost on the exact spot where in 1870 the terrible battle of Sedan was fought. which decided the fate of the secwhich decided the fate of the sec-ond empire. That this has been the plan of the German general staff is apparent to anyone who knows the condition of the northeastern de-fenses of France. Their weakest spot admittedly is between Lille and Maubeuge, on the Belgian frontier, for, of course, they never dreamt that their "buffer" state (Belgium) would be used as a means of at-

would be used as a means of at-tack by the Germans, and used so successfully, too. Whether the Kaiser's forces plan to take Brussels or to just isolate it and to turn northward toward Antwerp and the English channel, remains to be seen, like so many problems that present themselves at this stage of the game. If this is the idea, then, of course, the Germans must have invested Belgium, on the quiet, in such tremendous numbers, that either the first or the second army of the Moselle would be fully prepared to continue to march toward Paris. The Parisians, apparently, are being deceived this time exactly as they were in 1870 by the war of-fice, with bulletins of "great vic-tories" which amounted to no more than frontier fights and skirmishes, but kept the impulative Gauls in high glee until after Gravelotte and Sedan and the capture of Napoleon the truth began to dawn upon the the truth began to dawn upon the deceived masses who then—quite naturally—turned their wrath upon their government. We all know with what dire result to Paris and its inhabitants until the Germans took the city and established order out of the chaos and a stable government.

The Staats Zeitung is greatly plased to "nall another lie" in regard to the alleged capture of the flag of the "Death Head Hussars." which Parisian dispatches say was taken Paris makes much of the fact that Crown Prince Wilhelm himself was the commander of this crack troop, which has covered itself with immortal glory a century ago in the Napoleonic wars. But the truth is that the regiment, which in times of peace is always stationed at Danzig (where the crown prince reof peace is always stationed at Danzig (where the crown prince resided during his command of the famous troop), never has left East Prussia, and is now busily engaged worrying the Cossacks on the Russian frontier. China seems to be well aware on which side her bread is buttered. She has decided to make strong opposition against Japan's taking Kiaochow.
